Washington, March 12.-President Wilson issued this formal statement of his policy toward the Central and South American republics:

To abolish the civil service regulations would be to invite a storm of criticism and it is by no means certain that the Wilson administration will take any chances in that direction, no matter how insistent Democratic representatives become.

Democratic congressmen, however, are not without hope. They have a plan whereby an open door to the consular service may be established. Under the regulations a man holding a position in the state department carrying a salary of $2,000 or more may be transferred to the consular service without taking a civil service examination. There are at least eight, and possibly more, positions in the state department that are not under civil service that carry the required salary and which can be filled at the pleasure or discretion of the secretary of

NEW EXECUTIVES WELL EQUIPPED

Wilson and Marshall Learned as Governors.

THEY HAVE MANY ADVISERS.

President's Cabinet Keeps Him Informed-Vice President Receives Counsel From Democratic Senators and More Effectively From Senate Clerks. Clark Retains His Power.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, March 12.-[Special.]-Woodrow Wilson as president and Thomas R. Marshall as vice president seem to fit in with the scheme of things here in Washington, even after the Democrats have been so long out of power. These two former governors know quite a lot about the government business, besides having many able advisers. Mr. Wilson finds these CABLE AND CONANT RESIGN in his cabinet and among the thousand or more patriots who are staying in Washington with hopes that they will be called into the administration

Mr. Marshall is advised by a few Democratic senators, but more particularly by the clerks in front of him. who are among the most skilled parliamentarians of the senate and who know just what a senate presiding officer should do. Our two most prominent citizens seem to have started off

Ex-Speaker Clark.

Strictly speaking, it is ex-Speaker Clark now, although it will again be Speaker Clark when the new congress meets. The ex-speaker continues to hold his office in the capitol. He is going along just as if the office continued, and to all intents and purposes it does continue. Though there was talk a long time ago about a candidate against Clark, it died out, and Champ will be re-elected by a unanimous vote of the Democrats.

Making Committees.

Besides making tariff bills, the ways and means committee must make the house committees under the scheme adopted two years ago. Taken altogether, the system has not worked very satisfactorily. In fact, depriving the committees has been a failure to a large extent.

The Old Warfare.

We will probably witness a revival of the old warfare between the senate and house over the tariff bills. It is evident now that the senate will greatwhich the house sends over. That will again raise the question of prerogatives. The house claims the right over revenue and appropriation bills. The senate claims the right of amendment and makes many changes in all such measures. There is still a great deal of bitterness over the differences which developed over the appropriation bills in the closing days of the last session.

At times the different members showed considerable mettle. But all such differences finally were compromised. The hottest fight of this character ever known was when the Democrats last took control of the nation's affairs. The contest between the two houses over the Wilson tariff bill lasted for months, and the house finally swallowed every senate amendment.

Borah's Success.

If it had not been for Senator Borah there would have been no child labor bureau, and if it had not been for the same senator there would have been no department of labor bill. His persistence put both of these measures through. Borah was once heralded as an anti-labor man because he helped to prosecute the men charged with killing the governor of Idaho, but he has proved a good friend of labor dur-+ ing his six years in the senate. "Have You Got Yours?"

The question which each Democrat asks of his fellow partisan is, "Have you got yours?" or something like it. They are wondering, that army of patriots, whether there is really going to be very much doing in the way of distributing offices. Senators have their hands full keeping off the importuning crowds. The members of the house are more fortunate. Most of them have fled from Washington, at least all who know they can't get anything. while the others are in hot water.

Entertained the Crowds.

Secretary Wilson said he is giving the minimum wage proposition a good deal of study and does not care to outline his views at present. The president endorses a minimum wage for women, just as he favors an eighthour day for men as well as women. He believes conditions making starvation wages possible should be legislated out of existence by both the states and the national government. That the states have power to enact minimum wage legislation is not questioned, but the general opinion is that jurisdiction of the federal government in this regard is limited. Suppression of Child Labor.

President Wilson contends that the suppression of child labor is a state function and that the federal government could pass prohibitory legislation applying only to the District of Columbia and the employment of children by interstate railroad, express, telephone and telegraph companies. Likewise he is inclined to hold that the federal government could not go beyond this jurisdiction in minimum wage legislation. Senator Works said congress undoubtedly has the power to exclude of underpaid labor. "I am deeply interested in the revelations of Chicago conditions," he said. "Sooner or later we must establish machinery to bring about a minimum wage for women, both by state and national legislation. I think the Rusted and Eaten Away Weapon Still Capable of Being Bent Double-Made of Toledo Steel, Secret of Which Is Lost-It Was Dipped In Blood of Many Warriors.

A story of romance, of death and of Dunn .- Advt. adventure more strange than any yet written into fiction has been etched with blood and with rust upon a blade

Four hundred years have passed in writing the story, a story that had its beginning when Vasco Nunez de Balboa led his band of adventurers across the mainland of Central America to the coast of the Pacific and a story to which "finis" now has been written in the bringing of the rusted blade to Chicago. It is the story of the sword of Balboa.

On a trophy littered table in the Chicago headquarters of the United States marine corps the sword of the discoverer of the Pacific ocean is lying. It marine corps the sword of the discovwas recently taken to Chicago by Major W. N. "I found it gripped in the fingers of a revolutionary leader who had been killed when we captured Granada. The sword had been dipped by this man in the blood of sol- 24th diers of the republic. Before it reached his hands it rested for a brief time in a museum in the city of Managua. That's how we know it was the sword of Balboa. A native recognized it as the blade once in the museum."

It was in Toledo, Spain, that the sword was hammered out. The secret been lost to the world forever. Rusted and eaten away by four centuries, it still is possible to bend the long blade double. With the releasing of the pressure it whips itself into a straight, true

Sword Carried to Pacific.

Balboa carried the weapon with him on his march across Nicaragua. Tradition and what little history has been written tell that the sword was plunged into the heart of many a resisting native. When the adventurer finished his march to the western coast of Central America the blade was bathed in the waters of the Pacific.

Balboa was slain close to where the town of Granada now stands. The sword he carried passed into the hands of his murderer.

The years rolled on. In the course of time the blade was carried by warriors in many revolutions. In the little wars of the Central American aborigines the sword, lost to them by the Spanish wanderer, was carried, their traditions say, by every victor of each generation.

More years came and went and a semicivilization supplanted the savagery found by Balbon in the early sixteenth century. But the war and revolutions still continued, and upon the blade of the sword still was written the story of death.

It was a quarter of a century ago, Major McKelvey says, that the blade. now rusted and worn, but still vibrant and steel true, found its way into the museum in Managua. It was during the last summer that the latest revolution disrupted the country. General Zeledon gathered about him a ragged troop, and an almost successful effort was made to overthrow the government.

As the sword fell upon the trophy table its blade hummed for a single moment in vibration.

Wilson and Marshall Learned as Governors.

THEY HAVE MANY ADVISERS

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, March 12 .- [Special.] -Woodrow Wilson as president and Thomas R. Marshall as vice president seem to fit in with the scheme of things here in Washington, even after the Democrats have been so long out of power. These two former governors know quite a lot about the government business, besides having many able advisers. Mr. Wilson finds these in his cabinet and among the thousand or more patriots who are staying Redfield's Assistant Asks to Be Re- in Washington with hopes that they will be called into the administration

Mr. Marshall is advised by a few ularly by the clerks in front of him, who are among the most skilled parliamentarians of the senate and who know just what a senate presiding officer should do. Our two most prominent citizens seem to have started off

Ex-Speaker Clark.

Strictly speaking, it is ex-Speaker Clark now, although it will again be Speaker Clark when the new congress meets. The ex-speaker continues to hold his office in the capitol. He is going along just as if the office continued, and to all intents and purposes it does continue. Though there was talk a long time ago about a candidate against Clark, it died out, and Champ will be re-elected by a unanimous vote of the Democrats.

Making Committees.

Besides making tariff bills, the ways and means committee must make the house committees under the scheme adopted two years ago. Taken altogether, the system has not worked very large extent.

The Old Warfare.

We will probably witness a revival ly modify the different measures institute. The patients so presented which the house sends over. That were from a list of several hundred tain that the Wilson administration rogatives. The house claims the right ical board in making its selections over revenue and appropriation bills. was guided by a desire to obtain cases The senate claims the right of amendment and makes many changes in all of the disease, with the exception of such measures. There is still a great hopeless cases. deal of bitterness over the differences which developed over the appropriation bills in the closing days of the last session. At times the different members showed considerable mettle. But all such differences finally were compromised. The hottest fight of this character ever known was when the Democrats last took control of the nation's affairs. The contest between the two houses over the Wilson tariff bill last- jury and District Attorney Whitman ed for months, and the house finally swallowed every senate amendment.

Borah's Success.

If it had not been for Senator Borah there would have been no child labor bureau, and if it had not been for the same senator there would have been no department of labor bill. His persistence put both of these measures through. Borah was once heralded as an anti-labor man because he helped has proved a good friend of labor during his six years in the senate.

"Have You Got Yours?" The question which each Democrat asks of his fellow partisan is, "Have you got yours?" or something like it. They are wondering, that army of patriots, whether there is really going to be very much doing in the way of distributing offices. Senators have their hands full keeping off the importuning crowds. The members of the house are more fortunate. Most of them have fled from Washington, at least
